Rhodes Community,

We are so pleased to be returning to campus tomorrow! Students can return to their residence halls as early as 7 a.m. Friday if they would like to attend their virtual classes from there. Students temporarily housed in hotels will receive further communication today about their travel arrangements.

As a reminder, the Refectory and the Lair will both open at 11 a.m. tomorrow and will maintain their regular hours from that point on. The library and the BCLC will be open from 5 to 8 p.m. Friday and will adhere to their regular schedules after that. All Rhodes employees should plan to work their regular schedules on campus beginning tomorrow.

Since this will likely be the last update regarding the current situation, I want to express once again my gratitude to all our students, faculty, and staff who have weathered this winter storm with a tremendous amount of flexibility, resilience, and determination. I also want to thank our parents for your patience and grace as we moved through this process. We made it through together, and we are so excited to begin in-person teaching again on Monday. We have a wonderful and busy semester ahead of us, and I know our students will take full advantage of both their outstanding classes and the many extracurricular activities offered by the college.

I look forward to seeing you soon!
