The Honor System

Since the College's earliest years, its students have believed in living and working in a place where their integrity is respected and their word is accepted as completely valid. For this reason, the students of Rhodes College have established and maintained an Honor System.

The ultimate responsibility for the system's effectiveness rests on each individual student's promise to abide by the Honor Code and report any known infractions to the Honor Council. This judiciary body is composed entirely of students who are elected by the student body as representatives of each class. After investigating any reported violation of the system, the Honor Council conducts a trial and imposes a just penalty if the accused is found guilty. Although every offense warrants expulsion, extenuating circumstances may justify a penalty of suspension or probation.

Each student who enters Rhodes shall sign the following statement, affirming his or her understanding and acceptance of the Honor System:

- "As a student of Rhodes College, I hereby pledge the following:
- (a) I understand the Honor System and am aware of its implications and my responsibility to the System.
 - (b) I will not cheat, steal, or lie in official matters.
 - (c) I will make known to the Honor Council any cases of dishonesty I observe or become aware of at Rhodes.
 - (d) I give my full support to both the spirit and the letter of the System."

Standards of Community Life

Just as the responsibility for maintaining the code of honor at Rhodes rests with students, so does the responsibility for upholding the standards of conduct expected of all members of this campus community.

The Social Regulations Council, made up of students elected by each class, is the judicial body charged with seeing that the standards of quality life at Rhodes are maintained. The SRC investigates reported violations of community standards and may impose penalties ranging from various forms of disciplinary action to expulsion from the College.

Each student who enters Rhodes shall sign the following statement affirming his or her understanding and acceptance of the following standards:

"We pledge to treat the members of the Rhodes Community, that is anyone who lives, works, or learns here, as well as those who visit the Community, with conscientious respect, honor, kindness and evenhandedness.

We pledge to respect the property of other members of the Community, treating all such property with care equal to or greater than that accorded to our own property. Further, realizing that the property of Rhodes College, that is, its buildings and grounds and all encompassed within, serves to benefit all members of the community, we pledge to preserve this property for others to use after us. Understanding that adherence to these standards is necessary to promote community spirit, we pledge to report violations.

Remembering that the reason the Rhodes Community exists is to promote the intellectual development of its members, we pledge to help create an environment that encourages reasoned discourse and action in a way that promotes this intellectual pursuit for everyone."
