For Immediate Release:

Clough-Hanson Gallery at Rhodes College announces its third show of the spring season: CPG: *Come Visit

The Collaborative Projects Group (CPG) is made up of twenty artists from around the country: Josh Argo (Alabama), Lilli Bewley (Memphis), Kelley Van Dyck (Paris, TN), Elizabeth Danger Brown (Louisiana), Amanda Brown (Texas), Kathleen Mallaney, Susan Ratcliff (Louisiana), Joe Vaughan (Knoxville, TN), Susannah Morse (Mississippi), Pete Moore (Nashville, TN), Trisha Boyd (Oklahoma), Kate Burgess (Wisconsin), Alexis Harris (Memphis), Caitie Knoepp (Louisiana), Bridgette Lacher (South Carolina), Anne McMicken (Georgia), Scott Sicard, Margaret Drennen (Alabama), and Ruth Houston (Memphis).

The show will involve the CPG turning the gallery into an art shop that will maintain regular hours from Monday, April 7th through Friday, April 11th 12:00 through 6:00 pm. During that week the artists will take shifts creating the work for the show while people from the community are invited to come have a cup of coffee, make some art, and visit. The experience will wind up with the closing reception for the last day of the weeklong "show" on Friday, April 11th from 5-7 pm.

The show is an extension of the 144 Hours show from last spring that involved the 2002 manifestation of the Collaborative Projects Group. Like last year, each of the 500 invitations for the show was handmade by the members of the Collaborative Projects Group. Projects for the show will include traditional drawing and painting as well as other more elaborate efforts where participation from the community will help in finishing the pieces for the show.
