WOMEN of RHODES

MARGARET TRAHERN '21

From Rhodes' founding in 1848 into the 1880s, the college was strictly an all-male institution. By the late 19th century, a few females—daughters of chancellors and faculty members—were permitted to attend classes, but could not take exams or receive diplomas. But when Dr. Charles E. Diehl became president, things began to change, and fast. In 1917, with World War I in full swing, women were admitted into the college on an equal basis with men. Four years later, Margaret Trahern became the first woman in the college's history to receive a diploma. Now, Rhodes welcomes the first woman to serve as our president, Dr. Marjorie Hass.

Please join us at Homecoming 2017 as we celebrate 100 years of extraordinary women at Rhodes College, with special events beginning on Thursday and continuing throughout the weekend. We hope to see you here!
