Become Essential

in the classroom

The classroom experience at Rhodes is intimate and challenging. We value the type of engaging dialogue that arises when students and professors work together to investigate questions and problems they care about. In this environment, students are expected to formulate and articulate big ideas and contribute in major ways to the critical discussions and debates that take place in our classrooms and laboratories.

Up close and personal

In our dynamic learning environment, a stray thought can spark a new insight and have a transformative impact on the entire class. Both students and professors are always at a crossroads in our small-class setting, collaboratively deciding where to go and where to stop, how to navigate and how to detour, and how to close the distance between a topic and the people discussing it.

Scholarship is about curiosity

"Professors at Rhodes are passionate about pursuing the questions that have a real impact on the world in which we live. Our mentorship of students involves inviting them into the exploration of these questions, and not only showing them the kind of commitment and discipline that is required, but also the satisfaction and reward that comes from following a question to its answer."

Scholars by example

We believe in the power of the personal relationship between professor and student. The professors at Rhodes are scholars by example, and they believe the academic experience should be an intellectual journey for everyone involved. Our faculty work closely with students — in and out of the classroom — to challenge them to find their passion for knowledge, express themselves creatively, and discover the person they want to become.

“Academics here are extremely challenging, but nothing that hard work and study time can’t handle.”

Connect with professors

Directed Inquiry: Students who have a burning interest in a topic not covered in a course can work one-on-one with a professor to develop an independent study in that area.

Tutorials: Rhodes is nothing if not flexible. Tutorials allow students to complete coursework outside of the regular calendar sequence, with the agreement of the professor who normally teaches the course.

Research: Faculty serve as sponsors for individual or team student research projects and hire students to assist them in their own scholarly research.

Advising: Personal advising by faculty is a hallmark of the Rhodes experience and keeps students steadily on track to achieve their academic and pre-professional goals.

Fellowships: Students can pursue their own personal interests through self-designed fellowships in five categories: outside-the-classroom study/study abroad, research, creative activity, internships, and civic engagement. Faculty mentors guide fellowships.

The Rhodes Foundations Curriculum

At the core of the Rhodes academic experience is our Foundations Curriculum, which gives students greater freedom to follow their academic interests and aspirations as they develop critical-thinking skills that are fundamental to the Rhodes experience, the study of the liberal arts and sciences, and lifelong learning. More than 400 different courses are offered to fulfill the Foundations course requirements. Upon completion of the Foundations Curriculum, students will:

Develop excellent written communication skills	Gain facility with mathematical reasoning and expression	Critically examine questions of meaning and value	Develop intermediate proficiency in a second language
Participate in activities that broaden connections between the classroom and the world	Understand how historical forces have shaped human cultures	View the world from more than one cultural perspective	Participate in activities that encourage physical and emotional health
Read and interpret literary texts	Participate in the analysis of artistic expression or in the performance or production of art	Explore and understand the systematic analysis of human interaction and contemporary institutions	Explore and understand scientific approaches to the natural world

In the foreground, there are colorful, patterned folders or papers. To her right, another person with dark hair is partially visible, looking towards her. The background shows a library or study area with bookshelves and wooden tables.

“Our incredibly curious and engaged student body—and the energy and passion they bring to everything they do on campus—makes Rhodes an amazing place to be a professor.”

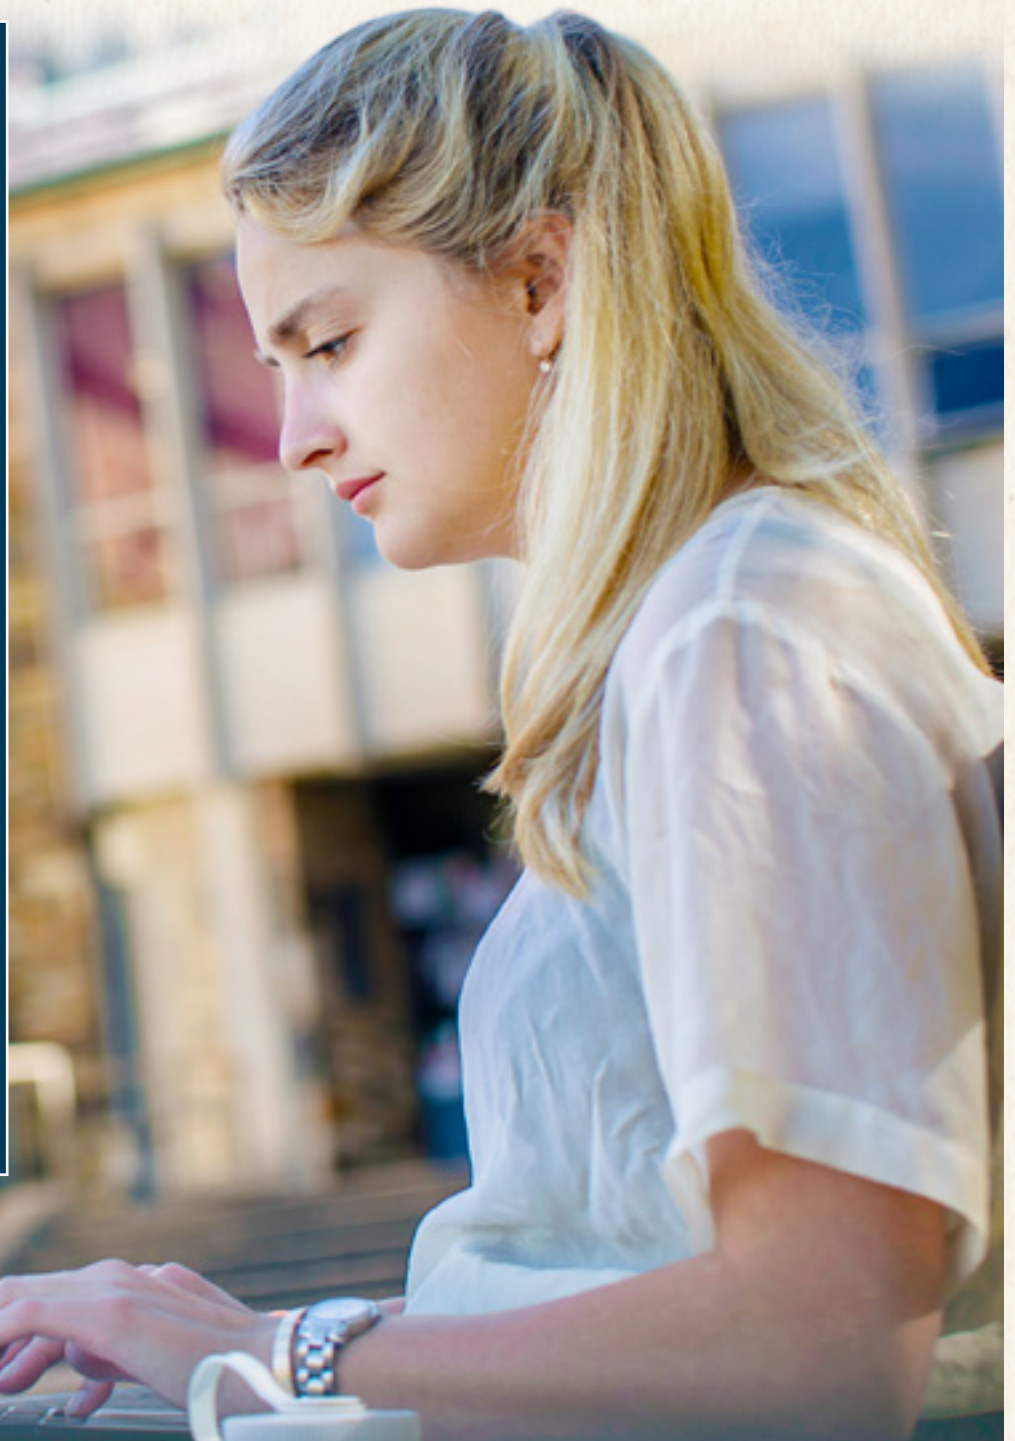

AMY JASPERSON
Associate Professor of Political Science

Self-exploration

Within the Foundations framework, students are required to choose one of two signature course sequences: “Search” or “Life”, both of which comprise three courses (12 credit hours) spread over three semesters.

The Search for Values in the Light of Western History and Religion

Search is an interdisciplinary study of the ideas, beliefs, and cultural developments that have formed Western culture. First created by the Rhodes faculty in 1945, Search has evolved to draw professors from 10 departments and includes courses from various disciplines that are organized chronologically from the earliest origins to the modern period. Students will explore texts from the ancient Near East, Greece, Rome, and the early Christian church.

Life: Then and Now

Taught by members of the Department of Religious Studies, the first two semesters of the Life course sequence focus primarily on how religions have shaped the world. Specifically, students are introduced to the academic study of the Bible, from the earliest text sources to modern interpretations, as well as the origins and beliefs of other religions. For the third Life course, students can continue their path within the religious studies framework or branch out into philosophy or Greek and Roman studies.

Cross-disciplinary thinking

“Employers in every sector continue to scoop up my students because of their ability to apply cross-disciplinary thinking to an incredibly complex world.”

LORETTA JACKSON-HAYES
Associate Professor of Chemistry

Solving archaeological riddles with chemistry

Rhodes follows the scholar-mentor model of liberal arts education. Undergraduates work closely on research or creative projects with their professors. Natalie Prodanovich '18, Hope Elliott '18, and Ryan Hunt '17, students of Dr. Jon Russ of the Department of Chemistry, had the opportunity to work on a unique research project that combines two seemingly disparate fields: archaeology and chemistry. By gathering organic residue from the insides of ancient pipes and looking for indicators of tobacco, Russ and his lab group are looking to determine when the use of tobacco began, which will help answer questions about indigenous Americans in the Southeast.

"When I started looking at colleges and found Dr. Russ, whose research involves both chemistry and archaeology, it was impossible to pass up," says Natalie. "Spending extra time in the lab and seeing chemistry used toward solving real-world problems has been an invaluable experience for me."

Engagement and scholarship through the Mellon Faculty Innovation Fellowship Program

"We work on different projects that involve digital technology, but also new methods of pedagogy, and cross-discipline projects, and we work on these in various academic disciplines," says Roz. "I've been working on about nine different projects this year."

Her main projects have included working in an historical documentary filmmaking class and an academic writing course that helps Rhodes students set up writing centers in Memphis high schools. For both courses, Roz conducted extensive research, but also looked for sources and contacts that could help broaden the information available to students and promote deeper investigation on the subjects.

Roz considers the Mellon Fellowship the culminating experience of her time at Rhodes. "It's been so much fun. Papers I wrote prepared me for this fellowship, and all the Mellon projects connect. It's really cool how it all comes together."

Research and creative activity

In every academic discipline, Rhodes students are conducting leading-edge research that produces original intellectual or creative contributions to a wide range of fields of study. Research and creative activity take many forms at Rhodes, from re-examining media coverage of the Vietnam War or analyzing the high levels of microRNA 201 in patients suffering from rheumatoid arthritis to redefining the Roman hero in Virgil's Aeneid or learning to conduct a choral ensemble. Every spring, we celebrate our students' accomplishments at the Undergraduate Research and Creative Activity Symposium (URCAS).

Study abroad

For the majority of Rhodes students, the classroom experience extends beyond the campus thanks to the college's diverse selection of study abroad opportunities all over the world and throughout the United States. Students may choose from our own signature programs and from among more than 100 opportunities offered through the International Student Exchange Program (ISEP) and Rhodes' bilateral exchange partners. Additionally, Rhodes students routinely study off-campus with a vast array of programs offered by other institutions and organizations. Finances need not be an impediment to experiencing off-campus study. The International Programs Office offers merit-based scholarships and need-based awards for study abroad—roughly $300,000 is awarded annually.

rhodes.edu/international-education

Examples of Rhodes study abroad programs:

European Studies: A practicum at the Universities of York and Durham and studies at Oxford University's Lincoln College are capped off by five weeks of travel in Western Europe.

Intensive Language: German in Bremen, Russian in St. Petersburg, or Spanish in Cuenca, Ecuador.

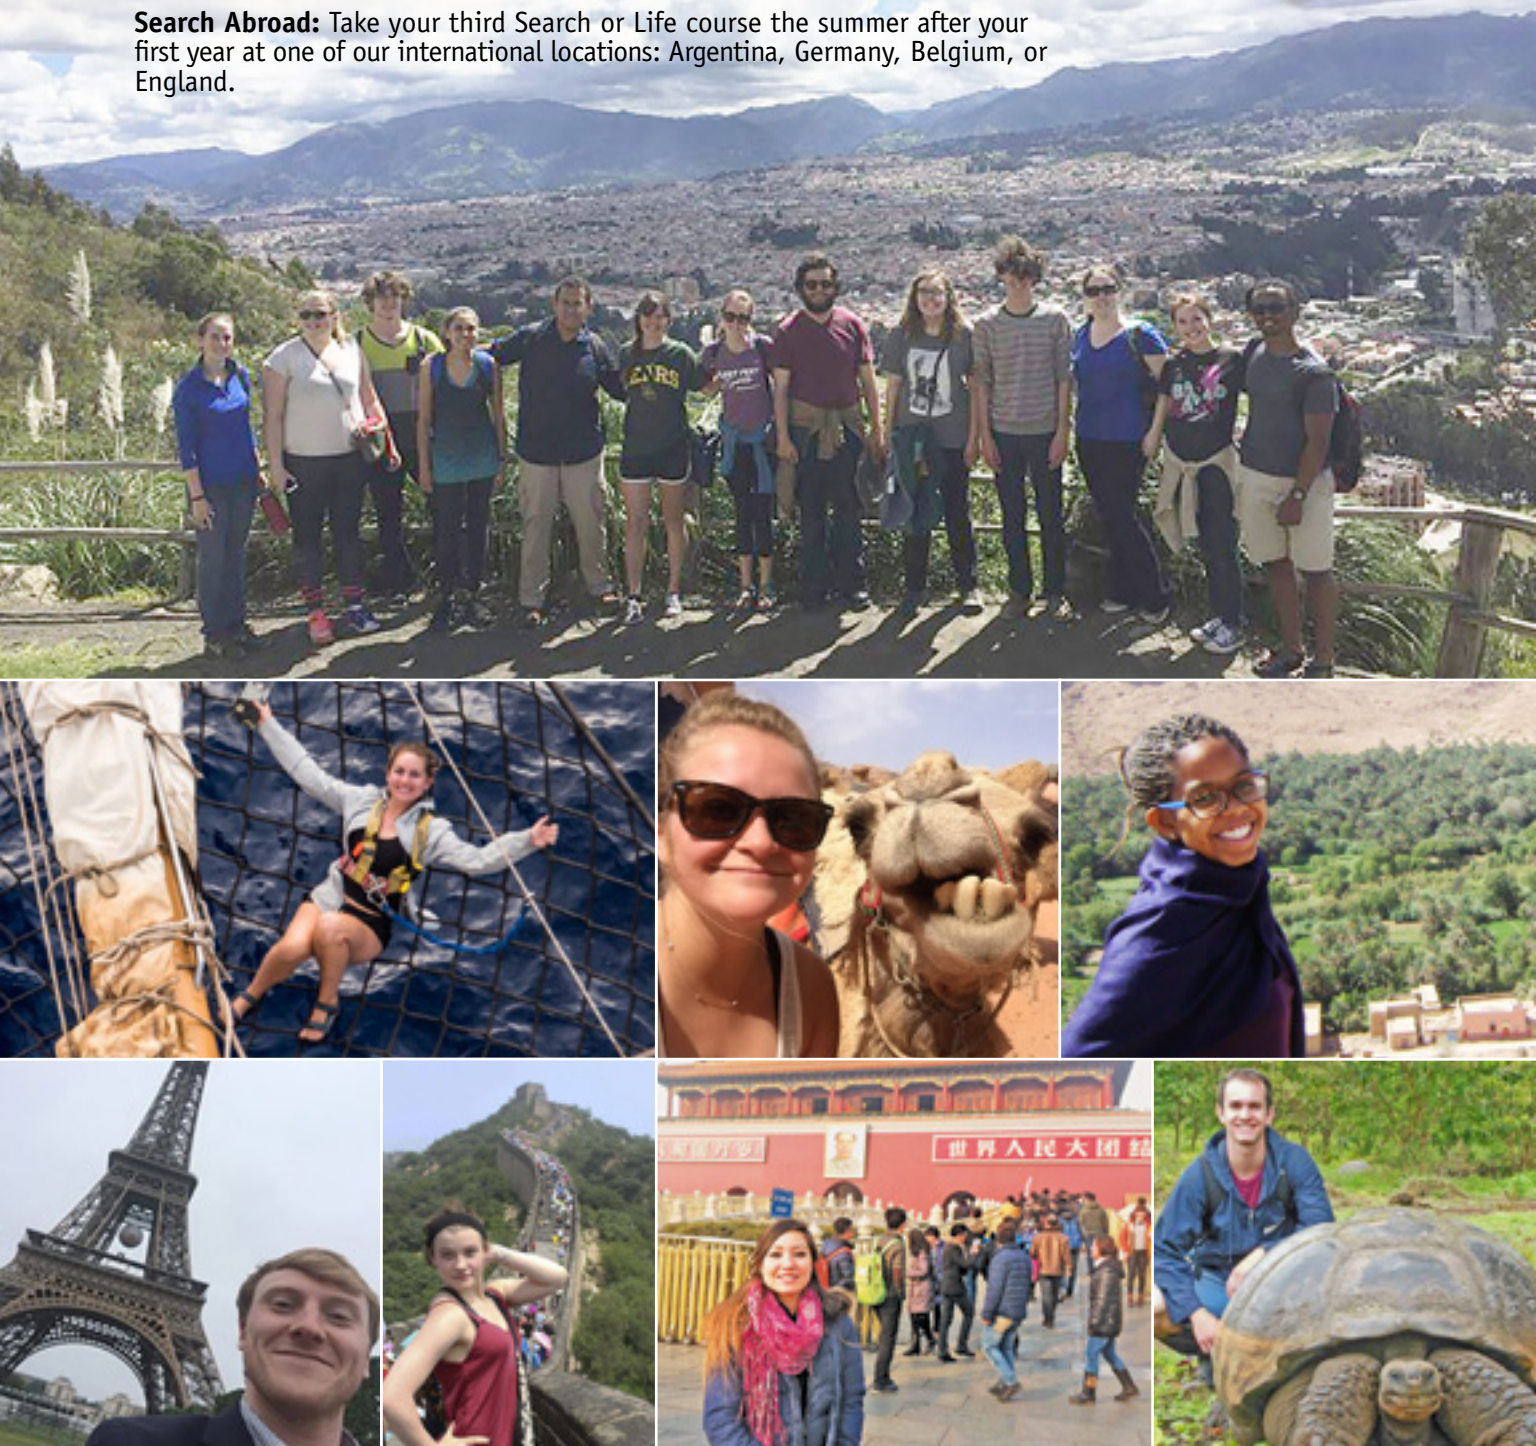

Environmental Field Study in Namibia: This Maymester program is an on-site exploration of the country's major environmental issues.

International Business Cases, Business in the European Union, and Religion in the Low Countries: Earn eight credits for two courses based in France and Belgium.

Search Abroad: Take your third Search or Life course the summer after your first year at one of our international locations: Argentina, Germany, Belgium, or England.

on campus

Rhodes provides endless opportunities for students to contribute, create, and lead. Whether serving on the Honor Council, working as a Rhodes Student Associate, organizing a community service initiative, participating in athletics or the fine arts, or bringing new ideas and energy to a student club or organization, our students define and enhance the Rhodes residential experience.

Residential by design

The Princeton Review named Rhodes the Most Beautiful
Campus in the U.S.

Our collegiate Gothic campus sits on 110 wooded acres in the heart of historic and eclectic Midtown Memphis. Every walkway, quadrangle, residence hall, common area, recreational area, classroom, and lab on campus is designed to encourage conversation, the exchange of ideas, and life-changing connections. In this supportive environment, Rhodes students and professors comprise a community dedicated to learning, honor, and integrity.

Living spaces

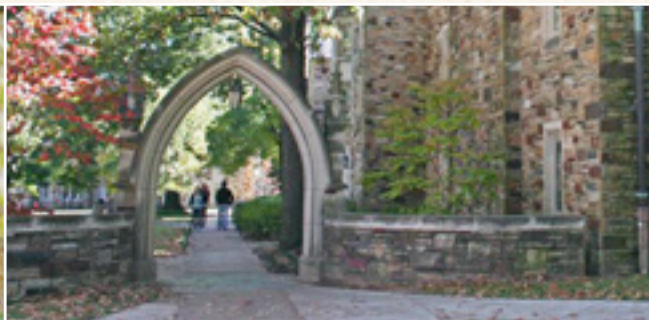

Our residence halls are wonderful examples of Gothic charm. Students have an enormous range of options, each unique in design and layout, from the Spann Place Townhouses to our West Village apartments. Most residences house fewer than 100 students, and each has its own special features.

Students who live on campus enjoy laundry, parking, cable TV, and Wi-Fi at no additional cost. And since students' key fobs provide access to all residences, they are free to enjoy the common areas in any hall, including study rooms, kitchens, lounges, and social rooms with pool tables and big screen TVs.

Dining places

For on-campus dining, the Catherine Burrow Refectory, which is known on campus affectionately as “the Rat,” includes four dining spaces and a grand servery, featuring a bakery, a brick pizza oven, a cook-to-order food station, and a fireside lounge. Nearby is the Lynx Lair, a pub-style gathering spot in the Bryan Campus Life Center that offers dining near the outdoor swimming pool.

A Community of respect

For more than a century, the Rhodes Honor System has encouraged students to fully express their individuality, while living in harmony with the broader community. Every fall, our first-year students participate in a solemn ceremony, where each signs a pledge to not lie, cheat, or steal, and to help create a community where respect and compassion for others are valued and embraced.

Get involved

Held at the beginning of the fall and spring semesters, the SACK Fair introduces students to our many on-campus organizations, as well as a wide range of service opportunities in the Memphis area.

It's no accident that the majority of Rhodes students are involved in our more than 100 on-campus student organizations. We intentionally seek students who are involved in the world around them and desire to contribute to their community. Rhodes provides endless opportunities for students to contribute, create, and lead.

in the city

Memphis is our home. Here, Rhodes students are helping researchers at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital find cures for childhood cancers, building racial understanding through our Crossroads to Freedom project, addressing the ills of urban poverty through education and health care, launching new businesses and nonprofit organizations, and focusing on environmental issues from an urban perspective. They are immersed in a culture where academic growth and social action go hand in hand, and where their ideas and actions make an impact in the real world.

“The school itself offers tons of service activities, cultural events, speakers and intramurals, and people like to get off campus and have fun in Memphis.”

Let's talk Memphis

The Beale Street Historic District, the Overton Square and Cooper-Young entertainment districts, and the South Main Arts District are all just minutes from campus.

Music is as exciting and diverse as our city, with world-class entertainers featured at local clubs and concert venues.

Restaurants are almost as legendary as the Memphis music scene — our students all have their favorites for everything from outstanding barbecue and burgers to fine dining and ethnic specialties.

Enjoy one of the top urban park systems in the country. Parks and greenlines cover 7,000 acres within the city limits. Overton Park, known for its old-growth forest and the Memphis Zoo, is right across the street from our campus.

Memphis is home to year-round sports action, with the NBA Grizzlies; the Memphis Redbirds, the AAA baseball team affiliate of the St. Louis Cardinals; and the Mississippi RiverKings (ice hockey).

Experiential learning

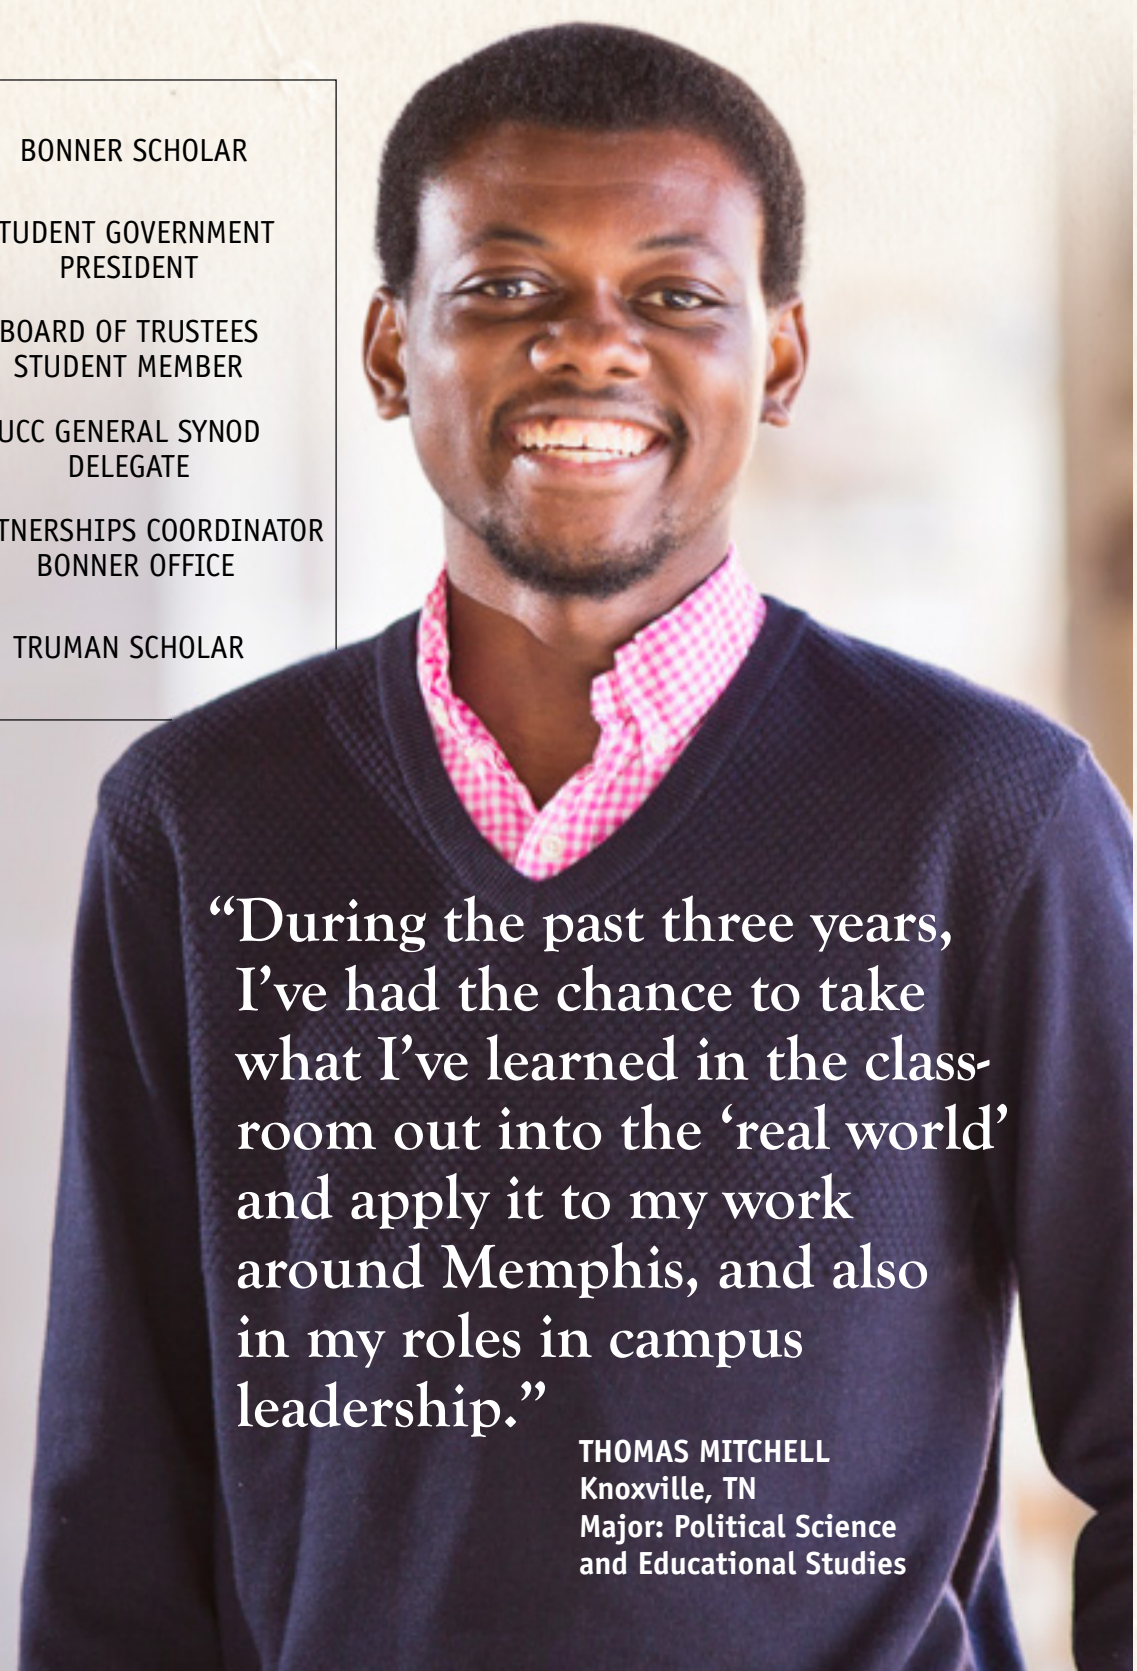

The Rhodes academic experience extends well beyond the classroom, and the college provides students with a wide range of unique fellowship opportunities. Whether it's working alongside world-renowned professionals at places such as St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, the Memphis Zoo, and FedEx, or creating a new experiential learning program based on a student's personal passion, fellowships are a crucial component of learning at Rhodes.

The Fellowships Program at Rhodes has pioneered a number of unique relationships that take advantage of the college's metropolitan location. Students are able to take their learning beyond the classroom and into the world around them. There are many established fellowships in all types of fields, from assisting in the labs at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital to studying animal behavior at the Memphis Zoo. Students, with the help of a faculty or staff advisor, can also create a new fellowship based on their personal passions. Here's a sampling of Rhodes fellowships; for a complete list and more information please visit rhodes.edu/fellowships.

Memphis Center Fellowship in the Arts

Allows students to launch and sustain arts-related projects in partnership with a faculty mentor.

Crossroads to Freedom Digital Archive

Connects the world with Memphis' civil rights-era history through an online repository.

Le Bonheur Summer Plus Program

An intensive research program that also allows students to spend time with treatment teams interacting with patients and families.

Mike Curb Institute for Music

Preservation, research, and education related to Memphis' rich music history.

Deaf Literacy Fellowship

Learn American Sign Language and assist organizations devoted to helping the deaf and hearing impaired.

Rhodes Institute for Regional Studies

Innovative research and service work in Memphis and throughout the Mid-South.

Rhodes St. Jude Summer Plus

Full-time research in the St. Jude labs for at least one and up to two summers.

Rhodes Learning Corridor and Community Development

Partnerships with the neighborhoods adjacent to campus, including four nearby public schools.

Rhodes/UT Neuroscience Research Fellowship

Extensive research experience at the Neuroscience Institute at the University of Tennessee Health Science Center.

Shelby Foote Collection

Student fellows participate in the organization, archiving, and presentation of these unique materials.

Summer Service Fellowship

An intensive, nine-week summer experience that challenges students to engage in significant community projects.

Internships & employment

“Having the Memphis Zoo across the street has been one of the best things about Rhodes. Our professors are invested in us and the researchers at the zoo are willing to take the time for us to obtain new skills.”

Seventy-five percent of Rhodes students complete internships throughout Memphis, and the college considers the city an extension of the campus. Students apply their classroom knowledge to such areas as business, finance, health care, or nonprofits and, in return, gain real-world experience from top-notch mentors.

Rhodes also helps students connect with internships across the country and even overseas. Our students have worked for the U.S. Department of Commerce in France and Croatia, taught English through nonprofit organizations in Cambodia, and helped a U.S. firm set up operations in China.

Alumni, who are active members of the Rhodes community, provide some of our best internship opportunities. They often serve as internship sponsors and mentors, and help students build a network of professional contacts. We have Rhodes alumni chapters across the country in cities such as Chicago, Houston, New York, New Orleans, Dallas, Atlanta, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C.

The Rhodes Student Associate Program (RSAP)

The Rhodes Student Associate Program connects students to stimulating and important campus employment, where they can take on challenging projects and start exploring different career interests. At last count, there were 100+ RSAP positions available in more than 40 different offices and departments — and more are being added all the time. Students who are selected for RSAP positions can earn up to $4,500 a year.

Spencer Beckman came to Rhodes with one goal: to become a doctor. “Being in Memphis with St. Jude and Le Bonheur hospitals, which are innovators in the medical world . . . it seemed like the opportunities that Rhodes had to offer just made sense.”

Since coming to Rhodes, Spencer has become the first college-student coach at GrizzFit, a wellness and mentorship program sponsored by the Memphis Grizzlies Foundation that takes place at various schools and community centers throughout the city. “Being at Rhodes has very much helped me understand my future desires and ambitions and helped me grow in that regard. I’ve been very reassured that medicine is something important to me and that I’m passionate about, but I think being involved in GrizzFit and the greater health field has shown me how that importance is felt. As a doctor I can help one person at a time, but if I work in policy or some larger aspect of health, that’s how I’m able to impact the lives of more people, and in a meaningful way. It sounds simple to say that people’s health matters, but seeing the lives of children being bettered through something that I’m a part of has been incredible.”

A walk in the woods

The Urban Forestry Fellowship is a collaborative research program between Rhodes College and the Overton Park Conservancy. The fellowship is focused mainly on the study of the Old Forest State Natural Area in Overton Park. This large acreage of old-growth forest located in the center of metropolitan Memphis is a unique resource to Memphians and Rhodes students alike.

Mac Wilson, an Urban Forestry fellow, says, “It’s rare to have a residual tract of old forest in the middle of a dense urban area, with relatively little disturbance over the past 180 years, given its location. It’s amazing having a system to research, study in class, and recreate in literally across the street from campus.”

Mac and Urban Forestry fellow Ethan Williford worked on a project inventorying tree diversity and abundance in the Old Forest to provide information on the park’s management plan, as well as working on the final draft of the new Rhodes arboretum guide. With the help of Mac and Ethan’s work, Rhodes was recently certified as a Tree Campus USA for 2016 by the Arbor Day Foundation, a distinction the school has held since 2013.

Despite their shared passion for urban forestry, Mac and Ethan have embarked on markedly different paths at Rhodes. Mac is an environmental science major, so he has been studying the effects of human development on the environment for the past three years. Ethan is a history major, so stepping out of the archives and library was a change of pace. After attending Rhodes’ Environmental Archaeology field school, he has been able to use his history skills and apply them to natural development of the forest.

The man on the right has curly brown hair, wears glasses, a grey cap, a blue plaid shirt, a tan vest, and grey pants with black boots, holding a wooden measuring tape. The background is filled with green foliage and tree branches.

Engaging in community service is nothing new at Rhodes. For two years in a row, Newsweek magazine named Rhodes the #1 service-minded school in the U.S. The Kinney Program is Rhodes' most direct connection to service and social-action opportunities in Memphis, with about 100 local community partners. And, our Bonner Scholars Program offers scholarships to up to 15 entering students who have a strong commitment to change-based service. Summer Service Fellowships are intensive nine-week summer experiences that award academic credit for working full time with Memphis community organizations.

Rhodes Service Scholars, part of the national Bonner Scholars program for scholarship and community service, traditionally wear red high tops at Commencement to illustrate the motto “Walk Loudly” in everything they do. Rhodes offers up to 15 four-year service scholarships to entering students who have financial need and an exceptional commitment to serving in the community.

Become Essential

the world

We provide our students access to world-class faculty and real-world experiences, which enables them to develop the intellectual muscle to move big ideas and the character to do so in the service of humanity. Choose any important field of human endeavor — from medicine, law, or education to business, politics, or the fine arts — and there are Rhodes graduates working within the discipline to change the world.

Admission to Rhodes

Of course, it's a given that successful Rhodes applicants can demonstrate their readiness for our challenging academics. Admission to Rhodes is highly competitive. Rhodes practices selective, holistic admission.

Our evaluation reviews each student's high school transcript, SAT or ACT scores, a written essay, extracurricular activities, and school and teacher recommendations. Further, we recommend that applicants be personally engaged with the college by visiting with the Admission staff on campus, in their high school, or in their communities. Students may also demonstrate interest through telephone calls and written correspondence with Admission staff.

Deadlines for filing the Common Application:

Early Decision I*
November 1

Early Action
November 15

Early Decision II*
January 1

Regular Decision
January 15

Early Decision (ED) applicants make a commitment to Rhodes as their first-choice institution and agree that, if admitted, they will enroll and withdraw all other applications assuming an adequate financial aid package is provided. Rhodes begins review of ED I applications on Sept. 1 and ED II applications on Nov. 15. Notifications of ED acceptance status are normally sent out within two weeks of reception of all supporting documents.*

Early Action (EA) applicants receive notification of their admission decision and eligibility for financial aid/scholarships by January 15. No binding commitment to attend Rhodes is required for EA consideration.*

Financial Aid

Rhodes provides tremendous value for the cost of attendance. The cost for tuition and fees at Rhodes is among the lowest of the national liberal arts colleges (U.S. News & World Report). Still, we understand that financing a college education is a big task, and we are here to help. We carefully consider every student's circumstances and do our best to help make it possible for every accepted student to attend.

How to Apply for Financial Aid

Students interested in receiving institutional (non-federal) aid must complete the CSS PROFILE. Students interested in receiving federal and state financial assistance must also complete the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). The college recommends that each student complete both forms by the deadlines to be eligible for the most aid.

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is available at fafsa.ed.gov. Completion of the FAFSA is required to determine your eligibility for federal financial aid. Tennessee residents must complete the FAFSA to be eligible for state awards, such as a Hope Scholarship or TSSA Grant. The FAFSA form must be filed each year since the need analysis is based upon the family's most recent financial information. The Rhodes College code for this form is 003519.

The College Scholarship Service (CSS) PROFILE is available at profileonline.collegeboard.com. Completion of the CSS PROFILE is required to receive Rhodes College grants. The Rhodes College code for this form is 1730.

Rhodes annually awards more than $5.9 million in achievement-based scholarships and fellowships. Awards range from $6,000 to full tuition.

Your application for admission qualifies you for consideration for most of our merit-based awards. We also have award programs that recognize noteworthy achievements in specific areas such as service or the fine arts.

Merit-Based Scholarships

(no separate application required)

Scholarships are a type of aid that are awarded for a particular talent or achievement based on the information in the Common Application when submitted for admission. They are not need-based. The funds do not have to be paid back, but there is usually a requirement for renewal of the scholarship each year.

Incoming Student Scholarships & Fellowships

(separate application required)

These scholarships and fellowships are awarded based on a separate application, interview, audition, and/or portfolio submission, depending on the program. Scholarship and fellowship funds do not need to be paid back; however, scholars and fellows agree to participate in either an academic, leadership, service, or fine arts activity while at Rhodes.

Generally, students will not receive both a scholarship and a fellowship, although they may compete for as many as they are eligible for in order to increase their odds of earning a scholarship or fellowship.

Military Scholarships

Rhodes is pleased to have crosstown agreements in place with the University of Memphis and branches of the Armed Forces such that students desiring military careers can receive officer commissions in the Air Force, Army, and Navy while earning Rhodes degrees. Scholarships may be "national" ones that are secured as high school students or awarded by the local ROTC unit at the University of Memphis. Military scholarships cover tuition and fees costs. For students receiving these scholarships, Rhodes provides room and board.
