Convict Claims He Helped To Bury About 12 On Arkansas Prison Farm

Woman Charges
Police Beat Her!

Mrs. Dorothy Pendergast, a 17-year-old Memphis woman, said she was殴打 and beaten by police officers at the Collierville, Tennessee, Police Department in connection with a search for a missing girl. She said she was beaten and bruised on her head, neck, and back.

Mrs. Pendergast, 35, said she was arrested at her home on June 21 for allegedly throwing a rock at a passing car. She was released on a $500 bond and later appeared in court.

She said she was taken to the police station and questioned about the missing girl. She said she was殴打 with a club and that she was in pain when she was released.

She said she was later taken to the hospital with a broken arm and a fractured jaw.

The police said they were investigating the case and that the girl was found safe and sound.

Supreme Court Takes Teeth Out Of Anti-Gambling Law

BY CHARLES MCMURRAY

Washington (AP) - A federal appeals court today upheld a new anti-gambling law in the District of Columbia which, in effect, bars James Buchanan, head of a national gaming association, from attending the annual meeting of the Anti-Gambling League of America in Washington, D.C. The decision was unanimous and the court refused to grant a stay pending appeal.

The court's decision follows a series of appeals and a trial in the District Court which began in August 1947. The case was argued by Washington attorney, Dr. Henry A. Seiberling, who represented the Anti-Gambling League. The case was tried by Judge John G. Minton, who was later appointed to the Supreme Court by President Truman.

The court ruled that the anti-gambling law was constitutional and that the plaintiff, James Buchanan, had no right to interfere with the operation of the law.

Scientist Explain Origin Of Life
From Ames Research Center

The means by which, although they have appeared in form that has been interpreted by scientists of the Ames Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration near Mountain View, California, is the energy source of the universe. The energy source is a star, which is the source of all life. This has been suggested by scientists at the Ames Research Center of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration near Mountain View, California.
