Your professional beautician knows the answer...

Can your hair be damaged from brushing, alone?...

All hair becomes damaged from exposure to sun and weather elements. Certain groups of proteins and chemicals in your hair play a role in the integrity and structure of your hair. When these proteins are damaged, they tend to unravel and break off, leading to hair breakage. In addition, the effects of sun, heat, and cold can cause hair to become dry, brittle, and fragile. It is best to protect your hair from these harsh conditions by using heat protectants or using products that contain UV filters to block out harmful rays. Your professional beautician can help you determine the best care for your hair type and provide you with specific recommendations for maintaining healthy hair.
