Commemoration Season

It's a testing period for all as we enter this season of the year. It is a time when we are faced with the realization of the importance of our actions, the significance of our words, and the gravity of our decisions. It is a time when we are reminded of the values we hold dear, and the responsibilities we bear.

The pages of history are open to us. They show us the struggles and triumphs of our ancestors. They reveal the joys and sorrows of our fellow beings. They remind us of the lessons we must learn.

We stand at the threshold of a new season. We are faced with the challenge of making a difference in the world. We are called to be, not just passive observers, but active participants. We are called to be, not just bystanders, but leaders.

The season of commemoration is a time of reflection and renewal. It is a time when we are reminded of our past, and inspired to shape our future.

In 19th February, let us mark the beginning of this season with a heart full of hope and a mind full of purpose. Let us be guided by the light of history, and the wisdom of those who came before us.

Eden Morgan, a Negro student from South Africa, who entered the University of California with a scholarship, was expelled from the University in 1940. The expulsions were based on a charge of "irregularity in conduct" by the University's president, who said that Morgan was "a troublemaker in the campus and a threat to the welfare of other students." Morgan appealed the decision to the University's Board of Regents, which upheld the president's decision.

Morgan's case has been appealed to the United States Supreme Court, and the Court has agreed to hear the case.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) has filed a brief in support of Morgan's case. In the brief, the NAACP argues that Morgan's expulsion is a violation of his civil rights.
