The Hawks are off to a strong start this season, with a record of 26-14 at the midway point. The team is currently in third place in the Eastern Conference, behind the Boston Celtics and the Philadelphia 76ers.

Waiver Wire

The Hawks have made several significant acquisitions in the off-season, including the signing of free-agent guard John Johnson. Johnson, who has played for several teams in the past, is expected to provide a boost to the team's defense.

The Hawks' young core, led by stars like Trae Young and Cam Reddish, has been key to the team's success. Young, in particular, has been a revelation, leading the league in scoring with an average of 28.5 points per game.

The team has also struggled with injuries, with star forward Jabari Parker out for an extended period. However, the team has persisted and remains confident in its ability to compete at a high level.

The Hawks play their next game on Tuesday night against the Miami Heat. The game is expected to be a close contest, with both teams vying for a crucial win to assert their dominance in the conference.

The team's success has been accompanied by increased interest from fans, who have flocked to Philips Arena to witness the games. The arena is currently packed to capacity, with fans cheering loudly for the home team.

The Hawks have also been active in the community, with initiatives like the Hawk's Nest, which provides a safe and educational environment for children in the community. The team's commitment to community involvement is a testament to its values.

In conclusion, the Atlanta Hawks are off to a strong start this season, with a promising future ahead. The team's young core, coupled with strategic acquisitions and a strong fanbase, bodes well for their continued success.

Open Housing Law Will Make Very Little Difference, Says Broker

(By United Press International)

A leading Southern real estate broker told yesterday that a Supreme Court decision that all housing discrimination is illegal may have little effect on the sale of homes in those communities that are still practicing discrimination.

"It will have more effect on the sale of homes in those communities that are still practicing discrimination," said the broker, who requested anonymity. "But in communities that have already made a commitment to fair housing, this decision will have little impact."

The broker said that many Southern communities continue to enforce housing laws that discriminate against African Americans. He said that while the decision may help to bring about change, it will take time for the law to be fully implemented.

The Supreme Court decision, which was announced last week, prohibits discrimination in the sale and rental of housing. The decision is widely seen as a major victory for civil rights activists and a significant step forward in the fight against discrimination.

"This is a historic decision," said the broker. "It is a victory for all Americans who believe in equality and justice."

The broker said that while the decision may be significant, it will take time for the law to be fully implemented. He said that many communities continue to practice discrimination, and that it will take time for the law to be fully enforced.
