The Paper Ballot Will Be Counted

By MARCIE RASMUSSEN

ATLANTA -UPI - Secretary of State Ben Fortson predicted Tuesday at least one of Georgia's new election laws is going to cause the state trouble, possibly through contested elections.

The law says that when a voter has "clearly and without question. indicated his perference on the paper ballot his vote will be counted even through he make the bal-lot in a different way than the one prescribed in the election code. Fortson said one reason for the law, one of many election code changes assed by the 1968 General Assembly and recently drafted into State Election Board Rules, is that the whole method of marking primary ballots has been changed

Formerly, primary voters schatched out all the names except the candidate they were voting for. yow, the code says a voter should mark an X or check mark beside the name of his candidate as is done in the general election.

The other reason for the switch is to allow straight ticket voters to cross over and choose a candidate from another party. Formerly if the straight ticket box was marked for one party and the same of opposing candidate was marked, the ballot was tossed out "There ought to be one way of voting" Fortson said. "A man's ball lot ought to be sacred enough for him to mark it right."

He said he was "afraid we'll have trouble with it. I think the chance of it leading to a contested election is too great to be over-looked and we need to get rid of

A spokesman in the attorney general's office said he was "less passimistic" about the outcome of the new rule, but agreed the changes this year could cause some

Under the new rule, a primary ballot will still be counted if names are struck out and the the voters clearly indicates his choice. But the code now specifies the other method of marking by an X or check and legal experts encourage voters to change the new way.

The "cross over" provision was made law after the contested 1966 congressional race in the 4th Dis-congressional race in the 4th Dis-trict between Democrat James Mackey and Republican Ben Black burn. Several thousand ballots were thrown out because voters chose the straight party Republi-can ticket and also voted for Mackay. That meant a vote for both candidates which was not Basically, to be patient (in the Christian sense of the word) is to persevere, to refuse to give up. MEMORY SELECTION: "The steed of the consequence of the people of the consequence their injuities, and they is the rewards that would be suffered many injustices, in and sometimes designed." Today, in studying the Book of James, we analyse the rasis of our prayers whether they are a true communing with God, or whether they are prompted as is too often the case) by our urgent, often spasmodic, needs on a personal basis.

We are all too prone—in the few Disciples to be patient to devote minutes we are wont to devote His second coming, warning to the patient of the patient o to introspection in our busy lives ever, that no man could enour th - to regard prayer as something day or the hour that this we to be called upon to ienfluence God come about; they were, never he be rooted in a sincere desire to would be ready to receive than Prayer and confession of line went hand-in-hand in the yes of James. Certainty we can not expect to approach God in prayer if our souls are weighted dow guilt! Only if we approach God with candor can we feel the close-ness of the supplicant to the Pather, and a sense or renewal and reconciliation.

And the subject of our prayer is not to be taken lightly. We must not only pray for forgiveness or our sins, but we must pray for others. The physically ill need only prayers and a place in our hearts. But so, too, do the spiritually unsaved If we are to be effective in prayer, we must first learn to develop patience in service, in His name. Then — and only then — will we be worthy to approach God

We Wish For Ike A Speedy Recovery

We join with millions of other Americans in expressing regret that former President Eisenhower has suffered another heart attack since entering recently the Army hospital in Washington.

We recognize and appreicate the great service this American leader has rendered his country, both in war time and in peace.

And in spite of this age of 77 years, we wish for him a speedy recovery. Our country is still confronted with many serious problems both at home and abroad, and his counsel and experience can still serve the best interest of the nation.

It is no wonder that President Johnson recently sought like's counsel when the latter was at his California residence.

Not long ago a Gallup Poll revealed that the man Americans admire most is former President Dwight David Eisenhower.

And we remember him as meeting the most critical race issue since the Reconstruction Period when he sent the U.S. Army to Little Rock in 1957 to uphold the federal court in a desegregation ruling. This took great courage and unprecedented action as far as the rights of our people are concerned.

Other presidents followed his precedent in similar desegre agtion cases.

Eisenhower got the nation out of a desperate situation in the Korean War in 1953.

For a time after his retirement from the Presidency it was fashionable to knock like as being a "golfing" President.

But like is still greatly admired by the American people, and logically, for among other things he rendered his country outstanding service as a soldier. And it could well be that the qualities which make a great soldier have a somewhat different application in the happy world of politics and bureaucracy, that actions considered weakness by some are considered strength

TEXT: "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." - Philp pians 4:11.

If we are honest with ourselves we will have to admit that there have been many times in our nives when we have been "looking for green pastures." We have thought so, often that the grass in other pastures were greener than the grass in our pasture. There have been times we thought that ail was perfegt with us but our pasture was poor. Times when we thought we were all right, but the other people were all wrong. If we could only change other people our pasture would be green.

Many of us blame the field for the lack of green grass. We think the trouble with our job, our boss, our fellow workers, our employers

The doctor looks over the fence and sees the school teacher. He thinks a doctor has such a hard time. No vacation ... calls in the middle of the night long labor cases, etc. He might be quoted,
"if I had only been a school teacher. I would have three months vacation, no work on Saturdays."

The school teacher say "I I had only been a dector just think of the money I would be making. My salary is so small teaching school." Another looks at the preacher, "if I had only been a preacher. I would simply work a few hours on Sunday set chicken. Sundays, eat chicken, be showered with gifts!" The house wife looks over the fence and cries "if I had only remained singled. 41-D The word robot is only 45 years old, one can learn from William & Mary Morris' fascinating Dictionary of Word and Phrase Origins (pub. by Harper & Row, 2 vols.). Robot was coined by the Czech dramatist Karel Capek in the play R.U.R. in 1923. Actual automatons are much older. They figure importantly in toy history.

Among many toys invented in 1868, for example, was a walking-automaton. Movement of the feet was achieved through an arrangement of crankshaft, belts, wheels. Another new toy in 1868 was a baseball game device with automated pitcher, batter and catcher, operated by wind-up clockwork. Earlier, ingenious craftsmen had given motion to ranct figures of doll proportions by attaching them upon pull-toys, Turning of the wheels made the figures dance, how, wave arms, turn about, even somersault. The walking-automaton of 1868 was followed by one that crept like a baby.
